Children cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Pathetic and Romantic.

Happening in at Justice Swan's office yesterday, we met a young couple who were married at ten o'clock the same day, and are already beginning to see trouble. The bridegroom is a Santa Fe brakeman named Alfred Lander, aged 29, while the fair bride was Miss Mollie James Herndon, though she has been known to her Dodge City friends as "Scissors." Some ten years ago Johnny Carrington met with the misfortune to have both his feet frozen off. Soon afterwards he met Miss Mollie Herndon, then a beautiful young girl of slender, willowy figure and eyes like a gazelle. The young girl took pity on his misfortune, and has been supporting him ever since. She has a house nicely furnished over in the west part of town south of the railroad track, and has not only been doing the housework, but earning a living besides. About five months ago she took a young brakeman named Alfred Lander to board, and her health having failed, they all three had to make do on what nourishment the board money would buy. Yesterday morning Lander and Johnny had a little disagreement about the latter getting up to help Lander celebrate his approaching marriage by taking a drink with him. Johnny regarded the intended bride as his own and thought she and Lander ought to have more consideration for his feelings than to get married, so he spoke exceedingly rough to Lander, threatened to kill him, and fiercely grabbed a chair as though to smite him, when the latter picked one of Johnny's wooden legs and cracked him over the head until the blood gushed out in great profusion, swelling the sheets and bedding with gore.

At ten o'clock Alfred Lander and Miss Herndon appeared at the office of the Probate Judge, took out a license and were committed for life in the holy bonds of matrimony. Then fearing that Johnny would disturb the peace of his bride and himself, Mr. Lander went before Justice Swan and swore out a warrant to have him bound over to keep the peace. Johnny then made complaint against the new bridegroom for assault and battery in this to-wit, that he had tried to beat out his brains with his own legs.

Mrs. Lander told the scribe that her health was not what it once had been and her physician had advised her against earning a living as she had been for Johnny, and she thought it time to marry and settle down. She had been brought up under Catholic training, she said, and that had kept her from getting married until she could see a chance to live decently, which she said she could not do with Johnny for a husband.

We shall be pleased to see Mr. and Mrs. Lander make a model household. We believe the woman is in earnest in her resolve to be a true wife, and ought to be encouraged by all good people.

Santa Claus visited St. Cornelius church last Monday evening, and provided a rich treat for the children. A most beautiful Christmas tree had been placed in one corner and was loaded with presents, which were freely distributed to the children. A most excellent musical service was rendered by the choir under the leadership of Mrs. J. W. Gilbert. Much credit is due the choir and the Chapter of the daughters of the King, by whose self-sacrificing efforts, and true Christian zeal, the entertainment was made so helpful and successful. An amusing feature of the affair was the sudden and ferocious attack of a dog on Santa Claus as he entered the church, which furnished a rare treat of fun to the audience.

Last Wednesday W. S. Wollen, who has been in the U. S. railway mail service on the Rock Island route the past four years, and has a run between Dodge City and Liberal at present, brought a beautiful young lady up with him and they were immediately united in matrimonial bonds by J. M. Burson, probate judge. They were married at the Ortel house, and are said to be a well assorted couple. He is a blonde, while the young lady is a very pretty brunette. For some reason the young lady's parents objected, and though the girl was nineteen years old, and past the age when necessary to ask the parents' consent to make it legal, they concluded to run away and get married in Dodge City. They took a wedding trip to Kansas City. We wish them a happy life.

It Paid.

The Dodge City business men are beginning to awake to the benefits which may be reaped from judicious advertising. One merchant who published his price list in the Globe-Republican, was asked if he observed any effect from it. "I should say I had," exclaimed the dealer, "The ladies come in from a distance and produce copies of the Globe-Republican with items they want, marked in the paper."

Another dealer said it was surprising how quick teams began to arrive from a long distance to take advantage of his prices.

We are glad to know our business men are receiving satisfactory returns on what they pay for advertisements in this paper. There can be no better investment for a business man than properly prepared advertisements published in a country newspaper which the people read.

The cases above referred to were display advertisements containing prices of goods.

Topeka Capital: Hon. W. J. Fitzgerald, of Dodge City, will represent Ford county in the House this winter. He was in the city yesterday looking up a location for the session and secured quarters at the Copeland. Like all of the western Kansas members, Mr. Fitzgerald is of course greatly interested in irrigation. He believes that while the legislature should consider the times, that it can well afford to make a reasonable appropriation to test the various methods of irrigation so that a farmer will not have to invest his all in a plant that may prove worthless to him. While he is not in favor of any exorbitant expenditure of money, he thinks the outlay should be sufficient to give thorough and practical tests, and as the state can make experiments that will do for all the farmers who are interested it will save the people of the state in the long run many thousands of dollars.

New Winter Forage Crop.

Thousand-headed kale is receiving some attention in English agricultural papers as a winter forage plant and possibly may be used to advantage here. Its growth extends over several months when there are no other green crops. It is a good substitute for turnips and mangel wurzels. As the crop belongs to the cabbage family it requires about the same cultivation. It will grow well on any but a poor clay or gravelly soil. The English custom is to drill it in rows about 30 inches apart, and after the plants reach a fair growth thin out so that they will be about a foot apart in the rows. The crop then makes a good green fodder way into cold weather. If winters are not too severe it will start up in the spring and make good green food until the land is used for other crops.

Roads as Railway Feeders.

The great importance of good roads as feeders to railways has often been illustrated in the experience of this company. Highways are occasionally impassable, and do for that reason frequently prevent farmers and others from bringing their products to our stations.—L. J. Sergeant, Montreal, General Manager Grand Trunk Railroad.

By gathering up all rubbish around the garden and orchard, harboring places for insects during the winter may be destroyed.
